“ Rick could always be counted on to sing in the Hospice choir at the Remembrance services. I enjoyed singing beside him -- Will the Circle be Unbroken.

“ Rick began volunteering with Hospice of NGMC in 2012 working with our bereavement counselors sharing his lived grief experiences as a way to connect with and support others going through their own grief. This was valuable work but his real gift was working with other volunteers on projects. He always drew people in with his smile and friendly conversation. He even surprised us one year with his Santa outfit and routine. It was the hit of the Christmas project day. Over the past year since Rick had been unable to volunteer, other volunteers would frequently ask about him. Now, volunteers have seen the obituary and been calling our office asking with sadness, oh, is this our Rick? Our Rick. He was one of us. We will sadly miss him but keep the memory of his smile in our heart. I wish you comfort during this time. Carol Jewell, Volunteer Coordinator, Hospice of Northeast Georgia Medical Center.
