I'm still in disbelief that you are gone. But who am I to ask why, if God saw you that you suffered a lot.

Growing up with Ate Mimi was fun. Thought me how to play guitar. Brought to the parlor and have my hair cut short with a small piece hanging on the back. You ride with us (Cate and Shiela)going to school making sure that we are safe. Those are the few memories growing up with her. One time you came home screaming saying you will not wash one side of your face for a week and I asked why? Aga Mulach kissed me on my cheek :) and you really didn't wash your face for a week.

1st time you left me when you migrated here in US and you broke my heart big time. That's the saddest moment of my life. I'm in high school that time and having hard time coping. But I have to move on. I said one time we will see each other again and we did. I am grateful we had a great time every time I visit you in Georgia and even invited my best friend who knows you well.

Ate mimi is the real meaning of word ATE (big sister). She will talk and let you know if you are right or wrong. For all she knows she's talking to you as her big sister.

And now you left us again not because you have to leave but it's your time to rest in God's hand. You've been thru a lot and God saw how you suffered and God knows it's time to give you rest. I will miss you ate mimi our weekend long talk. Our text messages about our fur baby. Rest in God's hand Ate mimi. I love you. Till we meet again.

“ When I think of Mimi, I always smile. She was such an amazing peer here at work and was one of my "go to" people when I needed answers. She was always willing to assist, even when her plate was full and deadlines glooming around the corner. I miss my friend and have prayed for her and the family over the last year.

It makes me realize even more, how precious time is and quickly things change.

I pray blessings upon the family and pray that God shines His face upon each and every one that is impacted by this tremendous loss.

“ Thank you Ate Mimi for being my home away from home. You were my safe place. I always somehow find myself booking a flight to Atlanta & ending up on your doorstep when I felt lost and needed guidance (which was almost yearly since I was 21). You were one of the few who had the ability of understanding me and making me feel seen. You are and always will be one of biggest influences in my life. You taught me to push myself, always fight for what I believe in, and how to be unapologetically real. I appreciate everything you've done for me. Rest easy Ate Mimi, I love you so much.

“ I met Mimi in 2018 during my first Project Management role at AT&T. I will never forget how she supported my transition in this role and the guidance she provided. It seemed like Mimi knew everyone and everything and she proved to be a great resource for the entire team. I have prayed for her and with you during this journey and I'm so sorry to hear of her passing.

Kind regards,

“ I have very fond memories of Mimi and her family. Andy and I were co-workers for a decade or more and were invited often to their house for parties. Andy supported me when my wife passed away from cancer almost a year ago. Everything about Andy and his family was genuine and hard won. Mimi was a fighter just like Miriam and they fought hard, now they rest and pass the torch. God Bless Amanda, I see Mimi's resilience in you...always have. Everyone sees it. Andy, I am always here for you and I know the pain you have endured and will continue to endure. It won't get better but you learn to accept it. Please take time for yourself, She would have wanted you to heal and process this on your own time. Lean on your closest friends and try not to think of unpleasant things or things you couldn't control as it will consume you, trust me.

Love
