Beverly later became a nurse and devoted 57 years to caring for others, viewing nursing not just as a job, but as a calling.

Beverly was a devoted fan of Braves baseball, a passion that began in childhood as she cheered alongside her father for the Boston Braves. Her loyalty followed the team through its moves, first to the Milwaukee Braves after she married her husband Tom and relocated to Milwaukee, and later to the Atlanta Braves when the family settled in Atlanta in 1970. It was in Atlanta that Beverly began working in labor and delivery at Piedmont Hospital, where she took great joy in helping welcome many newborns for Braves players and their wives. “ I'll always remember the millennium New Years Eve that we all spent together at my house we had so much fun with family ringing in the new year. That might have been the year that Scott and Steve put firecrackers in my fireplace. Ms Beverly was always so kind and will be missed and thought of always.
