“ I have figured out, finally, how to get these two pictures out of a messaging app. Eureka! These are the last two pictures taken of Carl Lawrence Harris II. They were sent to our daughter in a text as a goofy thing by her daddy. He was SO proud of his long hair and beard, y'all. He envisioned himself as a mighty Lion, or a valiant Viking...never a hippy! He and I were totally different in our response to the 60's cultural upheaval. I embraced it all, too much. He longed for the traditions and stability of earlier decades. We lived our lives, close together in shared history/memory as I was only five days older than him. Finally, I used to tell him that he looked a bit homeless, with his hair on the fly. The kids in the stores thought he was Santa Claus (he loved that!). So, I would sit him in a chair, comb and braid his hair, comb and balm his beard with sandalwood oil. Finally brush his mustache into a small upward curve and wax with citrus wax. Enjoy these last pictures of my "Daddy Lionheart"

“ I remember when we first met Carl. It was at a Sugar Hill fall event in the park. He was so warm and welcoming. I will miss him very much.
