“ I'm very sorry to have read Charles has joined the communion of saints, a man who is a dear in close friend, confidant as one who was a great companion who enjoyed exploring the philosophical and theological mysteries of life with great conversation with geneality. We made each other laugh. He was a great help with my discernment of becoming a monastic. Of course, we shared countless hours commiserating together on the golf course. I will always cherish my memories of Charles and the close friendship I enjoyed with him. My world was certainly a better place with Charles in it. My deepest condolences to his family.

“ I have only known Charlie for couple of years. We met over a cup of coffee at McD in Dacula.
He was one of the most gracious, encouraging, and friendly persons I have ever met. God brought us together as one of His miracles!
Love and prayers to his family. He left a legacy in his own quiet way.

I met Charles on the golf course and he invited me to the Men's Bible Study he co founded. I am forever grateful for that invitation where I have learned more about God's word than in my previous decades of life. Charles was a great friend and with his dry wit could make any day bright. I will miss you Charles and know you are in the presence of God.
