“ 1 year ago, my first soulmate, was reborn into another world. Daniel was a beautiful soul. His flaws were nothing compared to his heart. I feel like I always knew that he was going to live fast and die young. At first I was sad...in shock..to hear he had died. I know now the best way to celebrate him is to remember the good times and create in his memory.

His smile is still shining from the eternal space of light. I can feel it when the sun shines.

Today he was reborn. He is connected to spaces that I visit in my subconscious...in my dreams.

Sometimes I feel senses of his energies. I am grateful to be in this space but I am melancholy for his sweet comforting soul. I am so deeply joyful we got to know each other. I will always love him..

I nurture my longing and selfishness that wanted to keep him here..I know now that what I don't know, doesn't mean much. There is always more to see..and just because we may be blind to what happens..I feel in my heart it is more than just a body disintegrating.

I feel like when death comes it is not dark, it is bright with truth and expansiveness. I think Death is just our bodies being born into another world. If I don't know or can't see beyond the veil that doesn't mean the other side is nothingness.

Who am I to judge nature and assume anything just because someone i loved is gone?

When really there is more to the story.

Maybe our story doesn't die with our body, maybe it is carried by our soul wherever it goes.

The memory of Daniel will live on forever.

We may have had our hard times but the truth is, that never made me stop loving him.

I will cherish his memory..and when we meet again in another life

I'm sure we will have a good laugh about our limited views of the afterlife.

If life is possible here on earth. Life is possible beyond death. What I don't know, doesn't mean much. What a gift to wait and see.

“ Our hearts are broken. Our thoughts and prayers are with his family, Dany, and good friends. We learned to love Daniel because the special beautiful person he was, always sweet, smiling and playful with our little Benji. We shared many special family times together and we always enjoyed him. He loved Dany and our Benji and he was part of this family. We miss him so much.

*Rosa & Dave,
I want you to know that every time the tears come to my eyes I am praying for God to give you strength and help you through this difficult time.*
