“ Tracie Zac I been searching my whole life blindly because no one would give info a light my Daddy. To day I confronted my mom because something inside was telling I'm running out of time, as soon as she confirmed my Dad is Jim Martin I googled him with a quickness, only to find out he has died three months ago. MY BIGGEST FEAR CAN TRUE.
I'm an only child but always felt I had siblings out there some where. Please let me meet y'all.

“ I was so sorry to hear about Jim's death. I know that he has been struggling for so long and I feel that he is at rest now.

I only have wonderful memories of growing up around my Aunt Launa and Uncle Hugh's children. I was made so welcome during the summers that I came to visit and I have great memories of playing games, wading in the creek, singing songs on the front porch at night, eating those wonderful biscuits and pinto beans. I think about those time so often and feel so lucky to have grown up around such wonderful people.

Not being around Jim much during our grown up years is a regret, but I always looked forward to reunion times when we all could get together. Jim and my husband Johnny had the grocery business and meatcutting in common and I can remember them talking about that during the reunions. Jimmy always gave me a big hug and that wonderful smile and I knew that there was a special family love between us.

Just treasure the good memories. Realize that we are all just humans, and delete the bad memories because they are no longer important.

May God bless you real good and give you the peace and comfort that you need right now!
