“ Papa, we will always miss you. In my heart, you will always be alive. Although you are gone, your memory will never be forgotten. I will always remember everything you taught me. Each day I go to work remembering what you said, "Find a job you love and you will never work a day in your life." I will always love you and have you in my prayers.

“ Poppa J, we will miss you. There will always be a sense of emptiness without you at the head of the table. Those who know me know I tend to do better with these things on my own. This is a part of my personality passed on to me by my father. Hear is what my father left behind. A small but strong family that heals pain and turmoil by turning christian holidays and family gatherings into major events that resolves any problem without even having to speak of the issue. Traditional American values, particularly religion, family, work ethic, education, and taking care of your finances, are the most important things for keeping your family safe and strong. Know the difference between wanting and needing. Know the difference between loving and enjoying. Loving is for living things and enjoying is for hobbies or objects. Crack a smile even when you don't feel like it. Exercise patience, even if you don't know how. Always respond to a greeting with, "I am happy, healthy and terrific. I am great! The most important thing that I learned is when the end of this life is near, all of the above will come together, you will not be alone, your family and friends will all come together for comfort, and all will be good. If you are the type that can not tell someone you love them, at least make sure you can show them you love them in away they will understand once you are gone. I can tell you all with confidence, the heavens will have the prettiest front lawn and a garden with the biggest tomatoes and cucumbers you have ever seen. My family thanks, with the most humble regards, all of you for the gifts and condolences. God bless you all. You are all a part of what I mentioned above.
