“ So much to say, but there are not enough words. Justin was my BFF, he touched my heart and I am forever grateful that he was in my life. I met Justin in my last year of college and he was going to 2L, I was drawn to him because of his calmness and how he was always willing to help. We were inseparable, we used to talk for hours about everything and nothing, sometimes I think he knew me better than I knew myself. I've imagined my life in many ways, but never a world without you. In April we talked, and it felt like we never stopped. You will forever live in my heart because true friendship and love never dies.

Forever your Gigi.

“Justin, my brother, where do I start with the memories with you, Ashley, and I?”

From the times we would all go get breakfast together to the times we would order a pizza and hang out in your parents basement shooting pool until late at night.

I remember watching you grow your passion for sports and I being an influence on your love for football. Although we rooted for different teams, you would always root the Titans on and be among the first to celebrate with me something good that would go right for my team. Despite our love for different teams, at the end of the day, we were family and that bond was all that mattered.

I remember the times I would blow up your phone just to talk sports and ask when we would hang out again. I always enjoyed your company and being around you.

It saddened me when you decided to move to New York. I knew I wouldn't be able to spend as much time with you, but in my heart I knew you were going to live your dream, so I supported it. You being happy makes me happy.

Two vivid memories that comes to my mind, is the day you called me while I was at work out of the blue. You said to me you were home alone at your parents house and you heard a loud bang. You thought that someone was in the house. I immediately told you to stay calm as I was going to come straight to your parents house. I called Ashley to let her know what was going on. While I was on the way there, you discovered the table just randomly broke and glass shattered everywhere. It made me have a huge sigh of relief. You knew I had your back and I wouldn't let anything happen to you.

Another time is when you helped Ashley and I move into the townhouse and came to my house looking like you showed up for a job interview. I joked with you asking if you wanted me to interview you. LOL

That was you though. You mirrored your fathers image, to always look sharp and presentable.

When I look up at the sky now, I know there is a guardian angel that watches over the family. That guardian angel is a son, a brother, an uncle, and a cousin to a family that loves and adores him. He is a spotlight in our heart and we know that god has him in his hands.

Rest in paradise brother. I love you.

-Your loving brother Jamil
