“ My sincerest and deepest condolences go to the Johnson family during this, their time of grief, and for all and any grief that follows. I believe the last time I saw Larry Johnson in person was in 2005, during a chance encounter at the post office in Dacula. I was there to get some stamps for my mother and drop off some priority mail. My father had passed away the night before. Mr. Johnson saw me and immediately knew something was wrong. I told him of my situation and he hugged me. All he said was, "Stay strong." And that was all he needed to say to me. I knew everything else that was included in those two words: comfort, empathy, sympathy and love. He had known me since I was about nine years old. He knew I would understand, and I did.

You, Laura and Mrs. Johnson, and everyone else feeling this grief, are in my heart, thoughts and prayers.

Stay Strong.
