“ My earliest me of Aunt Marie was her holding my hand while jumping the waves in Ocean City, NJ. And another was at Uncle William and Aunt Angela's wedding. We were waiting in a car and she pretended to bite my fingernails. She was trying to get me to stop that habit!

Years later I visited my Aunt and Uncle in Georgia. She showed me her silverware with tiny punk ribbons tied around them for sorting, I guess. She and my cousins and I went out for lunch at a posh restaurant and all the men turned to view us. Guess we were all quite good looking!! She was special and part of the Greatest Generation!
