“ It's never an easy task to speak of someone as our words frequently fall short of capturing their true essence. In this particular instance they fall so far beyond the mark that I feel it is almost impossible to find the right words. Warrior, Strong, Wife, Hero, Selfless, Mother, Passionate, Sister, Aunt... Even a Great Aunt! I'm sure she is so mad at me right now for calling her that... "I'm not a great anything," she would say, "I'm just Aunt Lisa!" But actually she was... she was a great person! The kind of person people wished they had in their lives, the kind of person people were envious of, wishing they had a quarter of the strength and drive she had.

As I sat and read the beautiful things people were writing about her, I actually smiled. I smiled because no where did I read anyone say "she lost her battle with cancer." It's very frequent you read that people "lost a battle with cancer" But Aunt Lisa didn't lose, she won. She won a place that everyone wished they had, a place to be anywhere and everywhere at the same time, watching over all their loved ones, protecting them, guiding them and seeing them through the good and the bad!

I wish she was still here with us, to be able to give her one last hug, one last kiss, say a one last "I love you."

May you Rest In Peace ????? my dear sweet Aunt Sha Sha! I ?? you to the ?? and ??

“ Dearest Craig & Brandon,
I will always cherish the memories of the time we all spent together. Lisa will be missed more than words can express. She fought long and hard and was stronger than anyone I have ever met. May her memory be of a blessing to all who knew her. Love to you all,
