“ Nolan was my friend and my Soldier. This news hit me hard. I'm not gonna share a bunch of our drunken times, because there were alot. I am going to say that he was a good man, and not enough people were there for him when he needed them, myself included. Myself, along with about 100 other men who served in Iraq with him, are deeply saddened losing him so early in his life. Nolan had a few nicknames from the Army. But most people called him Phil, or Peaches.

So, Peach, rest easy. We will see you on the high ground.
