“ Daniella and the rest of the family, my condolences to you all. Your pop was a great guy. A true paisan! Celebrate this man, don't mourn him. He deserves that. Love you guys.

“ *KNUCKLES!!!
I LOVE YOU MAAAAN!!
You fought the long fight and in the end heaven won. Big props on having such a loving, awesome family. It was a true honor to be a small part (but have you seen me lately) of your lives. Good speed!*

“ *To my brother Peter, who I admired and always looked up to. I love you so much... you gave me a lifetime worth of memories growing up with you, sharing laughs, smiles, and watching scary movies. I'll miss all the cards you sent me through the years. I'll miss each special note and the silly things added like a piece of hot gum , a tea bag, or a mint! A big kidder he was. I need your strength in order to move forward fearlessly. I'm in mourning. You are a great man I love you always,
Your sister Julie*

“ In Psalm 56:8, God reminds us He is intimately concerned with every aspect of our lives.

Because of His compassion, He catches every tear that is shed. It doesn't matter how big or small, trivial or important, the sorrow might be. He records those tears in his book.

Peter is at rest...

Though death and sleep are not identical, they do have many things in common. Since Scriptures uses sleep as an analogy of death, there are lessons that we can learn from comparing the two.

1. Both sleep and death are inevitable, they come at the end of a period of work.

2. Sleep and death are where people rest from their labors.

3. Though death and sleep are a time of rest, they are not a cessation of being.

4. Those who are dead, as well as those who are asleep, will awake to face something new. For those sleeping, it will be a new day. In the case of the dead, it will be a resurrection with a new, glorified body capable of living forever.

“ I always thought of you like another big brother. You were a great cousin. I'll always remember the fantastic letters and cards that you always sent to Baba and Nana in Philadelphia. You're leaving a very rich heritage behind with your wonderful family and all those beautiful grandchildren. We all have another special angel in heaven to watch over us now ??I love you always your cousin Cathy
