“ I found this online today and only wish I had known at the time. I met Mr. Royce Glover back around 1987 or so when I befriended his youngest son, James. Over the next few years, I spent many a day and night at the home with the family. Royce was a hard-working man who cared for and took care of his family. Each time I was at their home, I was treated like one of their own children. I truly regret not being able to attend a service and pay my respects to this man in person. Rest well, Mr. Glover. Touch the face of GOD.
