“ Stacy was much much more to me than my Cousin. He was my Big Brother. Since Stacy and me were both only children we developed a brotherly bond that lasted my 54 years. I would always call him my big brother. To say Stacy was popular in high school was an understatement. He was the most popular boy in town. And I was always quick to tell people he was my Cousin/Big Brother. Growing up... on Saturday nights Stacy would spend the night at my house. My Dad would fall asleep reading his Sunday School lesson and Stacy and me would crawl quietly passed him to get to the kitchen to stuff our mouths full of Reese Peanut Butter Cupps. Then we secretly sneaked back past Dad and returned to the bedroom bursting with laughter and tasty Reese's Peanut Butter cups. We never got caught. The stories are endless. Times I will never forget. Stacy will truly be missed by his family and the many many friends he made in his life. Till we meet again Big Brother.

“ The memories of Stacy began around 1973, at a baseball practice, minor league baseball, his dad was our coach. It began a relationship one that has been more like family than anything else. Stacy was always a little taller, a little more physical than I was, but our competition was something I wish the kids today got to enjoy. If we got knocked down you knew who would pick you up! At the ages of 10 and 11 Stacy who the local punt , pass , and kick competition, he had a strong arm, and a powerful leg and foot. I finished 2nd to him, I was glad if I did not win he did. I was lucky enough to win the next 2 years, but Stacy always reminded me he beat me first. During our middleschool years at Meadowview, we played football and basketball together, I promise you that Stacy is someone who gave it 100% and had my back everyday. We spent the night at each other's houses, we were great friends for a season of life, when was in need of friends most. During those years, my mom fought cancer. We never talked about it much, I just knew he was there. High school came and went, life happened and we didn't stay in touch like we should have. I did see his mom and dad some and played golf a few times with Dwayne. Even called his mom and dad recently asking about Stacy and how they were doing! I look back now, I regret not doing more to stay in touch with him. But Big Stacy, I hope you know that you helped me during a difficult part of my life, and I am glad to say I call you a friend. Too many memories to post, and wishing we could still make more!
