“ Terry Hughes... A one of a kind man. He made no bones about anything. You knew how he felt and there was no question about it. Shooting it straight was not a problem he had. If you really knew Terry you would know he was a big Teddy Bear at heart. He may not have always done the right thing but he owned his mistakes and shared what he had learned with his family friends and young folks for their benefit. There were many "words to live by" by Terry Hughes, like if you got mad he would say "you can get glad in the same outfit" and "if you want to keep getting what you're getting keep doing what you're doing" - just to name a couple of my favs. Terry was a master craftsman in carpentry and design and would stay on task to complete whatever he set his mind to. He has crafted many structures that many of us still look at today and appreciate him for it. He had the respect of so many and loved making it happen. The man could fix anything at all, was a master mechanic and had a brain full of knowledge that only a portion of was shared. Me, my son and his alike, can go farther in life b/c a portion of his knowledge that he shared with us. He was so proud of his boys. I heard him tell Billy that the day he was born was the happiest day of his life on his death bed. I will always cherish the words he spoke to me of his love and concern for me as well. Terry could be very kind and I feel cherished by him. He held my son in highest respect and was always thinking of his needs and how he could reward him. He treated him as his own and was a father figure to my son in times he needed him to be. He was proud of Lee and proud to call him his son.

As everyone does, we had our battles to choose. Terry did what he wanted to do when he wanted to do it and I accepted that long ago. I could never imagine terry not in my life and certainly don't know how to now. I have good support from my mother, sons and friends we've made thru the years and I am so grateful for that. I made many promises that I need help making come true for him.

"TEEHARTO" My Love!... Forever and a Day.

A tragedy happened when Terry went to Northside Hospital Atlanta. Untrained, unqualified personnel and lack of medical attention can result costing a man his life and that is what has happened to my husband. He fought a tough fight for his life ending in him leaving us and all we know. It was horrific and something I can never forget. The man who kept me grounded, my confident, my life for 17 years is gone and sadness surrounds me with hopelessness. This cant be true.

“ I admired Terry’s ingenuity for fixing anything, we had that in common. I would do soldering jobs for him and he worked on my cars, heating & air. He would make me his assistant because he knew I was interested in learning about fixing things too. He taught me a lot and we had fun along the way. We both enjoyed working together, he was a great friend and I’m going to miss him.

“ In the limited time that I knew “Big T” even as his health was deteriorating he always had a kind word to share with me. Most of our encounters was when he was working on one of many projects. He had such a gift with fixing practically anything mechanical that was impressive in of itself. But his talents didn’t stop there. He was a true craftsman, carpenter. I will miss seeing his magic at work and his love for playing guitar. Via con Dios.

“ I knew Terry for about the last 15 -20 years. He ALWAYS greeted me with a smile. No matter what was going on, he genuinely seemed happy to see me. He could fix ANYTHING and was definitely my go to guy with any sort of construction or house building issues. I'm so sorry he is gone because the world was a better place with "Big Red" in it. My condolences to Terry (Digger) and the rest of the family.
