“ My heart is heavy today as the day you gained your wings approaches. I think of you daily as you were a huge part in my life and raising me! I can still hear your sweet voice saying my name. I hope I never forget it! I miss you somuch! I remember the first time you got to hold my son, you had this huge smile on your face and you just snuggled him up to you and talked about how precious he is. I can still remember your sweet little laugh, thinking of it makes me smile if only for a moment. I love and miss you more than I can express. Thank you for being the best grandmother that I could of asked for. I hope I am making you proud maw maw! Until we meet again please keep watching over our family!

“ I offer sincere condolences and Scriptural encouragement to the family. May God's loving resurrection provision (John 3:16) comfort you all as you look ahead to the time when "All those in the memorial tombs will hear Jesus' voice and come out." (John 5:28,29).

“ I remember spending every summer with her during my middle school years and how she loved it when I would come over. I loved being there while my dad would work and looking back those were some of my fondest memories of my mawmaw. She would do anything for anybody and that is a trait which defined her character. She was always trying to slip me a ten dollar bill or a coke and oatmeal raisin pie. As I type this I am crying thinking about you not being here anymore but I know I will see you again one day and you are no longer in pain. I hope you were proud of me as a grandson and because I was proud to call you my mawmaw..

I love you and miss you so much
